

Tool Sharing, Building a New Future:
A workshop on personal, ecological and economic transformation

Leaps and Bounds is a one-woman show produced by The Affording Hope Project (AHP), challenging and inspiring faith communities to examine the mandates of faithful living in relation to our current economic and ecological crises. Weaving biblical and personal narrative, economic theory, movement, music, song and ritual; the show has captivated more than 65 audiences across the country and received enthusiastic responses along the way.

Using creative tools to critique unjust systems and embody transformation, Leaps and Bounds functions as a launching pad, to ready individuals and communities for a new level of engagement. Harnessing the teachable moment in which we are living, AHP is partnering with faith-based advocacy and local activist groups to create 'Tool Sharing' events.

At this workshop, after experiencing Leaps and Bounds, participants will be invited to reflect and claim personal hope and challenge. Then, through a series of presentations and facilitated group discussion, participants receive information about local alternatives and practical responses as well as valuable resources that may support further learning and action. Lastly, we will share food and fellowship while learning about local food initiatives.

Please consider co-sponsoring this event. As a sponsor you may present material, help guide the discussion and disseminate information about your organization's work. See information below to learn more about Leaps and Bounds, and feel free to contact Tevyn East (info@affordinghopeproject.org) with any questions regarding this production.
